2011 PFIZER/AAFP Foundation Visiting Professorship
Program in Family Medicine Award Recipient

Cleveland Clinic Department of Family Medicine – Cleveland, Ohio

Visiting Professor: James Mold, MD, MSPH, of Oklahoma University Health Sciences Center

Summary of Program:

Dr. James Mold is an ideal visiting professor for a fledgling Department of Family Medicine. His extensive experience in practice based research and quality improvement research will provide faculty, residents and clinicians with knowledge, ideas and inspiration. Dr. Mold is well known for challenging conventional wisdom and inspiring innovative ways of viewing primary care medicine.

Objectives of this professorship program are to:

- Inspire Cleveland Clinic family physicians to engage in clinical research, quality improvement research and practice transformation.
- Inspire the Family Medicine Residency faculty and residents to continue their pursuit of medical home transformation and quality improvement, and inspire them to study and write about their improvements and transformation.
- Help Cleveland Clinic administrators to more fully understand the needs and the value of modern Family Medicine to Cleveland Clinic and the United States healthcare system.
